CLASSROOM SPOTLIGHT

Students in geometry classes at MIT were working on a project, that focused on the relationships between congruent and similar triangles, which was completed in groups and allowed the students to unleash their creativity and create visually striking works of art.

Through their hard work, the students were able to deepen their understanding of these key mathematical concepts engagingly and interactively. In addition to improving their grasp of the material, they also explored the practical applications of triangles in the real world.

Overall, we are incredibly proud of our students' achievements and look forward to seeing them continue to excel in their studies.
