2023 – 2024 SCHOOL YEAR

The Summer break just flew away and our teachers and team were back in action last week, for planning and preparing for the great start of this school year. MIT Teachers and Admin team participated in professional development where we brainstormed new ideas related to curriculum scope and sequence and best teaching practices.

This year, I personally invited our students to attend the welcome-back assembly in the MIT Lecture Hall. During this assembly, we shared very important information about what MIT has to offer and What MIT expects. Students were excited to learn many new additions this year for both academics and activities. The MIT term “RESPECT” was very easy to understand for students which inspired them to learn to work as a team.

SCHOOL UNIFORMS

It is a pleasure to see our students well-dressed and well-prepared on the school campus. I am very well aware of the situation that some of the students who are still waiting for their uniforms to be shipped. I will allow students to communicate with me if that is the case and excuse them if they are not in complete uniform. At the same time, we would still want our students to wear white color shirts/polo and black/khaki pants/shorts.

COMPUTERS/TECHNOLOGY

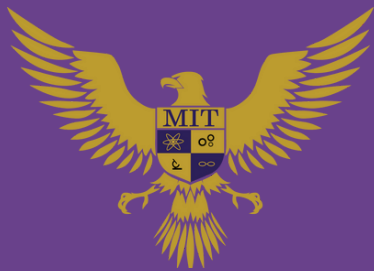

Our students are required to bring their own computers to work on their lessons. However, I understand if it is difficult to make such an arrangement quickly. If students need some more time to buy their own computers, we can let them borrow them from the school. They can come to the front office and request the application form to borrow the school computers and we will provide the best support we can.

UPCOMING BENCHMARK TESTING

All MIT students will be participating in Galileo Benchmark tests next week. Please encourage your student to try their hardest on these assessments. These assessments are utilized by both our administration and teachers to drive instruction in achieving academic excellence this school year. Our next round of benchmarks will be in December and will be a great opportunity to measure student growth.
